THE PEDIGREE OF HONYWOOD OF HORSHAM.

(See Berry's "Sussex Genealogies.")

By William Smith Ellis.

Genealogists of the present day are well aware that few of the old printed or even visitation pedigrees will endure critical examination. Most of them are purely conjectural in their affiliations; assumptions are freely indulged in, identity of persons is admitted without proof, dates are inconsistent, and a succession of lineal ancestors and descendants is strung together, plausibly as regards dates and circumstances, but without that evidence the absence of which makes a well concocted genealogy a mockery, a delusion, and a fraud. But who can tell on the face of them what pedigrees are proven and what are false? This can only be ascertained by a critical examination of affiliations and matches, through extraneous evidence, where none is given or offered.

The pedigree of Honywood, of Horsham, though apparently a truthful one, in its affiliation on to a member of the genuine Kentish stock, breaks down on investigation, and the whole fabric, as regards the foundation on which it is built, turns out to be baseless.

"Richard Honywood, Esq.,"* (the ancestor of all the Honywoods,

* I have been favoured by Robert Garraway Rice, Esq., of Croydon and the Middle Temple, with the following extracts from the Register of Horsham in reference to this family. It will be seen that Richard Honywood is styled neither "Esquire" nor "Gent" nor "Mr.," which, if he occupied such a rank, he would be sure to have been.

WALSINGHAM FAMILY.

Communicated by James Greenstreet.

The following extract from Glover's autograph collections furnishes, upon the authority of Sir Thomas Walsingham himself, the Christian name of the London merchant from whom he was descended. This information is an important addition to Canon Scott Robertson's pedigree of the Walsingham family, as set out in his account of the parish of Chislehurst, printed in the Transactions of the Kent Archæological Society.

[Harleian MSS. (British Museum), No. 807,[1] original folio, 9, b.] .
