PREFACE.

With the completion of this volume, the ninth of the New Series, I have once again an opportunity of thanking the contributors to THE GENEALOGIST for the valuable papers they have so generously offered for publication in this Magazine. A glance at the "Contents" will suffice to show that the support hitherto accorded us is maintained, and that some of the papers on genealogical and heraldic questions are of a particularly interesting character.

A slight alteration is proposed in the next volume, namely, to substitute for the Registers of St. Mary Magdalene, Bermondsey, a transcript of the Parish Registers of Ollerton, which Dr. Marshall has kindly placed at my disposal. The former, as far as it goes, is complete from the commencement, and it is hoped that an index will be forthcoming for what is already in print. The object of making this change is to print Registers which are too large for the body of the Magazine, and yet too small to print in monograph form. The transcript of the Ollerton Registers will occupy, with an index, about a hundred pages, and this will be followed by others, thus giving our Subscribers, in addition to the usual volume of THE GENEALOGIST, a series of small Registers separately paged to the body of the Magazine.
